The Children Present a Clever Entertainment

Shortly following the production here of the German play "Strewel Peter" a lady resident, discussing the affair, remarked, "Carmel has the cleverest stage children anywhere."

The remark was directed to a gentleman who had not seen the play, and [illegible] said, "I'm from Missouri." (He really was from New York).

At last Saturday evening's splendid performance by the children the writer sat near the aforesaid person from the Piker state, and his remarks were convincing evidence that he now thoroughly agrees with the lady above quoted.

It was a show to make us feel proud of our kiddies.

In "Strewel Peter" and in other children's plays the little actors have acted only, but in "The Kid" and the "Tusitala" burlesque they wrote and produced themselves what they so capably acted.

What a transition from the "penny-a-look" box of our youth!

Naturalism and realism may be said to be the elements with which the children succeed in making their dramatic efforts convincing and pleasing.

They realize, too, the value of climax and have a profound understanding of the importance of little things. They show us that the little things are really the most essential after all.

The splendid training and conception that these youngsters get in histrionic work is a real asset for future high-class and efficient dramatic work at our Forest Theatre.

Safeguard the Purity of Our Water Supply

The camper going into the mountains goes for pleasure or for health, hence his first care must be to avoid marring either of these. He must keep his drinking water pure from camp refuse. He can best learn how to do this by reading Special Bulletin No. 10 "Sanitation in the Mountains" issued free of charge by the California State Board of Health at Sacramento.

The camper does not always realize how far-reaching a little carelessness may be. C. S. Olmsted, superintendent of the [illegible] County Water Works, in discussing the problem with H. G. Merrill, supervisor of the Monterey national forest, recently remarked: "If the man who lives or camps along the stream would only think of the fellow farther down, it would go a long way toward solving the problem."

Now in the case of the Carmel river, for instance, "the fellow farther down" embraces the entire population of Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove and all the adjacent territory served by the water company. Olmsted's remark, therefore applied to the Carmel river, has a wider meaning than is apparent at first glance. The same conditions apply to many other streams.

Within the Monterey national forest, where the Carmel rises, the forest service and the water company co-operate to safeguard the purity of the headquarters of the Carmel. Else where the company also takes vigorous measures for the same purpose.

All persons who live or camp along streams are urged to read the special bulletin on sanitation in the mountains and to remember the dictum. "Think of the fellow farther down."

Exhibition Dance

Pretty costumes, graceful children, a good house, and a dance for elder folks later on—all these contributed to the success of the dancing exhibition given on Friday evening last by the pupils of Miss Jeannette Hoagland. These affairs we should have more frequently.

The total amount received from all sources for the purchase of the school victrola is to date $50.54. Not enough yet. Please bring in your subscriptions.

Fine Description of an Hawaiian Feast of Eats

The following is an extract from a letter received by Mrs. R. J. DeYoe from her sister, Mrs. Wood, who is spending the winter at Lihue, on the Island of Kauai, Hawaii. The affair described (a luan) was given in honor of Mr. Jay Gould and wife, the latter being a niece of the hostess.

"It was the most interesting thing I ever saw; a big lanai, roofed with canvas and enclosed on three sides with palm leaves, was built under the ironwood trees, at one side of the lawn.

"The table was set for eighty guests, and an Hawaiian orchestra was concealed behind the 'thatch.' We found our places, and donned the 'lei,' hanging on our chair-back, and sat down to the following menu, which was awaiting our 'discussion' in its entirety:

"'Puau' (pig roasted whole in the ground for twelve hours), poi, of course, in individual bowls made of polished cocoanuts; a small dish of relish; roasted kukui nuts; dried sea-weed; two small onions and a little pile of red native salt to use with poi; a dish of raw opihio (like our limpets); a dish of lummied salmon (pounded raw with onions, native peppers and salt); sweet potato poi (pounded boiled potatoes mixed with cocoanut juice; and the most wonderful desert — a sort of blanc mange made from native arrow-root and cocoanut milk with the juice of grated cocoanuts over it; and a pudding made of grated taro and cocoanut juice, baked under ground a la pig.

"Down the middle of the table was a row of watermelons, cut in saw teeth, and plates of plain boiled potatoes, and delicious mullet steamed in ti leaves At each place was a stein, and cunning native boys, dressed in white, poured beer or soda water.

"Presently two men came in carrying a huge roasted fish on a wooden platter, and I almost forgot to mention that crabs and lobsters, whole of course, which had to be 'shucked' then and there, as one required them. Some eats, eh.

I never saw people eat so; the old-timers with their fingers, poi and all, but knives and forks were provided as a concession to the pretty dancing frocks of the lady guests.

"A's table partner was a young Hawaiian, and after two glasses of beer, he made the most violent love to her, to the great glee of everyone within earshot, and he quite insisted that she get up and 'hula' with him. Several of the men danced a modified hula to my intense amusement; but listen!

"After two hours at the table, everything was removed and a canvas spread on the floor and the orchestra brought in to play for dancing. Between dances we had a real hula danced by one of the native girls.

"The evening was perfect; lights and chairs all over the lawn, and not even a baby shower to spoil the pretty gowns. You should have seen Mrs. Gould's gown — grass green brocade of some sort, apparently seamless, and with no trimming and no fullness, ending in a short pointed train. With this she wore a string of jade beads, striking but not pretty. She shows her Hawaiian blood a bit, and is very striking looking herself, and very charming. Of Mr. 'Jay' I will not attempt a decription; looks may be deceiving."

School Attendance

Parents should bear in mind that the money alloted for the conduct of our public school is apportioned on a basis of average daily attendance. When children are absent the income is reduced and with it the school's efficiency. Absences should be for illness only.

Keep the Forest Clean

The accumulation of tins, bottles, papers, straw, etc., in the pine forests close to town, left there by a number of summer campers, prompts the suggestion that hereafter the garbage collector exact from tent and automobile campers, as soon as they locate, a fee of 50 cents. The money would be used to pay for cleaning up after the campers depart.

It is Included

The impression prevailing in some quarters that the section known as the Eighty-Acre Tract is not included in the proposed Carmel incorporation scheme is erroneous. Consult map and description for particulars.

THE VOICE

By ALBERT VAN HOUTEN

Written for the Pine Cone

Surfeited here with beauty and the sensuous sweet perfume
Borne in from a thousand gardens and the fields of poppy bloom;
Awed by the silent mountains, stunned by the breaker's roar,
The restless ocean pounding and tugging away at the shore,
I lie on the warm sand beach and hear above the din of the sea
The Voice of one calling
Calling me.

Sweeter to me than the salt-sea spray, the frangrance of summer rains,
Nearer my heart than these mighty hills are the flow'red-covered plains,
Dearer the sight of a shy wild rose by Carmel's verdant way
Then all the splendor of foreigh fields in the sun of a vernal day;
Gay as the sweet poinsetta is, and the burden of orange trees,
This little spot of shore and pine is richer to me than these,
And rising above the song of the hoarse insistent sea.
The Voice of one calling,
Calling me.

Dear voice, sweet voice, today in Carmel's land,
Yours is the name I have dreamily traced with a bit of wood in the sand,
The name that springs from a loyal lip will make the hot blood start.
The name that is graven hard and deep in the core of my lonely heart
O higher, clearer and stronger yet then the boom of the savage sea
Is the Voice of one calling,
Calling me.

CLUB NOTES

By Miss I. A. Johnson

A week ago last Monday the Boys' Club had the pleasure of entertaining six guests: Miss Stella Danielson and Miss Betty Waud, teachers of the local school, Miss M. Williamson, a former teachet, Mr and Mrs. Benj Lichtenstein, friends of the club, and their nephew, Mr Grrwood Simon, who sang for them.

The matter of a "hike" and picnic to Point Lobos was discussed at a short business meeting; Thomas Gillett in the chair. It was decided to go during the week of Teachers' Institute, probably on Sept 12.

The evening passed quickly, with games, ending with ice cream and cake. Then the boys went on their way homeward cheering and singing.

The Young Mens' Club resumed its meetings last Sunday evening. The club will miss Benson Munger, who is attending school at Sacramento Nothing has been heard from our naval member, Herbert Hand, recently but he is undoubtedly having an active life on the South Dakota.
